OPINION

MARTHA CRAIG DAUGHTREY, Circuit Judge. In this civil rights action brought pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983, the plaintiffs raise a constitutional challenge to Michigan's alcohol distribution system, contending that state provisions differentiating between in-state and out-of-state wineries violate the Commerce Clause.[1] Those regulations prohibit

[1] Similar actions have been brought challenging direct shipment bans in North Carolina, Virginia, Indiana, Texas, Florida and New York, among other states. See, e.g., Beskind v. Easley, 325 F.3d 306 (4th Cir. 2003) (affirming lower court finding that North Carolina's statutory scheme discriminates between in-state and out-of-state wineries, violates the Commerce Clause, and is not "saved" by the Twenty-first Amendment); Bainbridge v. Turner, 311 F.3d 1104, 1115 (11th Cir. 2002) (finding that Florida's alcohol distribution statutes' differentiation between in-state and out-of-state wineries facially discriminates against interstate commerce and remanding for further fact-finding on whether Florida's statutory scheme is "necessary to effectuate the . . . core concern [of revenue raising] in a way that justifies treating out-of-state firms differently from in-state firms"); Bridenbaugh v. Freeman-Wilson, 227 F.3d 848, 851 (7th Cir. 2000) (finding that Indiana's ban on direct shipment from out-of-state wineries is constitutional because " § 2 of the twenty-first amendment empowers Indiana to control alcohol in ways that it cannot control cheese"); Swedenburg v. Kelly, 232 F. Supp. 2d 135 (S.D. N.Y. 2002) (finding that New York's ABC law's ban on direct shipment of out-of-state wine is unconstitutional); Dickerson v. Bailey, 212 F. Supp. 2d 673, 695 (S.D. Tex. 2002) (finding that Texas's ban on direct shipment by out-of-state wineries violates the dormant Commerce Clause and noting that the state had "fail[ed] to demonstrate how a statutory exception for local wineries from Texas' three-tier regulatory system . . . is justified by any of the traditional core concerns of the twenty-first amendment" or to show "that the core interests of taxation and orderly market conditions . . . could not be effected by alternative, nondiscriminatory options for these out-of-state wineries"), aff'd, Dickerson v. Bailey, 336 F.3d 388 (5th Cir. 2003); Bolick v. Roberts, 199 F. Supp. 2d 397, 409 (E.D.Va. 2002) (adopting, with amendments, magistrate judge's findings that Virginia's ABC laws violated the dormant Commerce Clause and that the state had failed to produce "any meaningful evidence" showing that the state cannot "accomplish its legitimate interests without discriminating against out-of-state direct shippers of wine"), vacated by Bolick v. Danielson, 330 F.3d 274 (4th the direct shipment of alcoholic beverages from out-of-state wineries, while allowing in-state wineries to ship directly to consumers, provided that the in-state wineries comply with certain minimal regulatory requirements. The plaintiffs, who include wine connoisseurs, wine journalists, and one small California winery that ships its wines to customers in other states, claim that this system is unconstitutional under the dormant Commerce Clause because it interferes with the free flow of interstate commerce by discriminating against out-of-state wineries. The defendants, who include Michigan officials (referred to collectively in this opinion as "the state") and the intervening trade association, argue in response that Michigan's regulatory scheme is constitutional under the Twenty-first Amendment to the federal constitution.

The parties filed cross-motions for summary judgment, and the district court granted the state's motion and denied the plaintiffs' motion. The plaintiffs then filed a motion to reconsider, arguing that the district court should have addressed cross-motions to strike various evidence submitted by the two sides prior to the summary judgment decision.[2]

Cir. 2003) (remanding for reconsideration in light of intervening change in applicable statutes); see also Cooper v. McBeath, 11 F.3d 547 (5th Cir. 1994) (striking down Texas's three-year durational residency and citizenship requirements for obtaining a liquor permit because these restrictions violated the dormant Commerce Clause and were not "saved" by the Twenty-first Amendment).

[2] Affidavits submitted by the plaintiffs included statements from various oenophiles; the Healds, who are wine critics and consultants; Domaine Alfred, a California winery; and several other wine and alcohol manufacturers and distributers. Many of the affiants attested to their desire to have wine from out-of-state wineries shipped directly to their homes, their inability to do so, the general unavailability of certain wines in Michigan, and the willingness of the wineries and distributors to pay required taxes and obtain necessary permits, if allowed to ship directly to consumers.

Documents filed on behalf of the defendants included reports from the Michigan Department of Treasury, Office of Revenue and Tax

The district court denied the motion to reconsider, noting that it had effectively denied the cross-motions to strike as moot, because it did not consider the challenged evidence in deciding the summary judgment motions.

The plaintiffs now appeal both the grant of summary judgment and the denial of their motion to reconsider. For the reasons set out below, we conclude that the regulations in question are discriminatory in their application to out-of-state wineries, in violation of the dormant Commerce Clause, and cannot be justified as advancing the traditional "core concerns" of the Twenty-first Amendment. We therefore reverse the district court's judgment and remand the case with directions to the district court to enter judgment in favor of the plaintiffs.

PROCEDURAL AND FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Michigan regulates alcohol sales under a "three-tier system": consumers must purchase alcoholic beverages from licensed retailers; retailers must purchase them from licensed wholesalers; and wholesalers must purchase them from licensed manufacturers. This system is similar to that used by

Analysis, which detailed estimates of lost tax revenue to remote sales; an affidavit from the manager of the Manufacturers and Wholesalers Section of the Licensing Division of the Michigan Liquor Control Commission that listed all licensed "Outstate Seller of Wine" license holders; an affidavit from the director of the Licensing Division of the Michigan Liquor Control Commission averring that, of the wineries from which the plaintiffs wish to purchase wine, some are licensed as out-of-state sellers, and the others have not applied for such licenses; an affidavit from the director of the Enforcement Division of the Michigan Liquor Control Commission detailing the number of "controlled buy operations" conducted by the Commission in Michigan to identify retailers that sell alcohol to minors; an affidavit from an assistant in the Liquor Control Division of the Michigan Department of Attorney General, detailing controlled buy operations conducted over the internet; and an (unsworn) statement by Sen. Orrin Hatch, made before the Senate Judiciary Committee, entitled "Interstate Alcohol Sales and the 21st Amendment."

most states. See Vijay Shankar, Alcohol Direct Shipment Laws, 85 Va. L. Rev. 353, 355 (1999).

The plaintiffs allege that Michigan's system discriminates against out-of-state wineries in favor of in-state wineries because it prevents out-of-state wineries from shipping wine directly to Michigan consumers, which in-state wineries are allowed to do. As the district court correctly noted, this distinction between in-state and out-of-state wineries can only be understood by reading a number of provisions in conjunction with each other:

> [The distinction] can be gleaned from various Michigan Liquor Control Commission regulations, which are codified within the Michigan Administrative Code. R436.1057 states that "[a] person shall not deliver, ship, or transport into this state beer, wine, or spirits without a license authorizing such action. . . ." The only applicable license, an "outstate seller of wine license," may according to R436.1705(2)(d) be obtained by a "manufacturer which is located outside of this state, but in the United States, and which produces and bottles its own wine." However, under R436.1719(4) the holder of such a license may ship wine "only to a licensed wholesaler at the address of the licensed premises except upon written order of the commission." In answers to interrogatories, a representative of the Michigan Liquor Control Commission indicates that "[a]t present, there is no procedure whereby an out-of-state retailer or winery can obtain a license or approval to deliver wine directly to Michigan residents . . . ."
> In contrast, the Michigan Liquor Control Commission indicates that the "ability to deliver wine to the consumer is available to winemakers licensed in Michigan, inasmuch as under the provisions of MCL 436.1113(9) these licensees are > permitted to sell at retail the wines they manufacture. . . . A licensed Michigan winemaker may deliver their [sic] own products to customers without an SDM [specially designated merchant] license . . . .

The plaintiffs contend that this differential treatment of in-state and out-of-state wineries violates the dormant Commerce Clause because it gives in-state wineries a competitive advantage over out-of-state wineries. In-state wineries can, for example, bypass the price mark-ups of a wholesaler and retailer, making in-state wines relatively cheaper to the consumer and allowing them to realize more profit per bottle. In addition, the cost to an out-of-state winery of the license that enables it to sell to a Michigan wholesaler is $300, while a comparable Michigan winery must pay only a $25 license fee to qualify to ship wine directly to Michigan customers. Finally, for customers who desire home delivery, Michigan wineries have a competitive advantage over out-of-state wineries that cannot ship directly to customers. In response, the state argues that the regulations to which an in-state winery is subject "more than offset, both in costs and burden, any nominal commercial advantage given by the ability to deliver directly to customers" and characterizes the burden on out-of-state wineries as "de minimis."

In its order granting summary judgment to the state and denying summary judgment to the plaintiffs, the district court held that "Michigan's direct shipment law is a permitted exercise of state power under § 2 of the 21st Amendment" because it is not "mere economic protectionism." In reaching this conclusion, the court found that Michigan's statutory scheme was designed "to ensure the collection of taxes from out-of-state wine manufacturers and to reduce the risk of alcohol falling into the hands of minors."

After this order had issued, the plaintiffs filed a motion to reconsider, asking the district court to rule on the motions to strike before granting either side summary judgment and to "make specific findings of fact based on the record" before reaching a final decision. The plaintiffs argued that the district court's failure to rule on the motions to strike "left the record devoid of evidence supporting the court's conclusion that the direct shipment law furthers legitimate 21st Amendment purposes," and that the court had applied the incorrect legal standard in dismissing the complaint. The district court denied the plaintiffs' motion for reconsideration, saying that it had not considered the challenged evidence in ruling on the summary judgment motions and that the motions to strike were effectively denied as moot.

For the reasons set out below, we reverse the district court's judgment, vacate the order granting summary judgment in the state's favor, and remand the case for entry of summary judgment in favor of the plaintiffs.

DISCUSSION

The central question in this case is how the "dormant" Commerce Clause and the Twenty-first Amendment interact to limit the ways in which a state can control alcohol sales and distribution. Article I, Section 8, Clause 3 of the United States Constitution grants Congress the power "[t]o regulate Commerce with foreign Nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian Tribes . . . ." The Supreme Court has long held that "this affirmative grant of authority to Congress also encompasses an implicit or 'dormant' limitation on the authority of the States to enact legislation affecting interstate commerce." Healy v. The Beer Institute, 491 U.S. 324, 326 n.1 (1989) (citations omitted).

In 1933, Congress enacted the Twenty-first Amendment, which repealed the 18th Amendment, thereby ending Prohibition. Section 2 of the Twenty-first Amendment prohibits "[t]he transportation or importation into any State, Territory or possession of the United States for delivery or use therein of intoxicating liquors, in violation of the laws thereof . . . ." Initially, the Supreme Court afforded the states nearly limitless power to regulate alcohol under the new amendment. See, e.g., Ziffrin, Inc. v. Reeves, 308 U.S. 132, 138 (1939) ("The Twenty-first Amendment sanctions the right of a state to legislate concerning intoxicating liquors brought from without, unfettered by the Commerce Clause."); Indianapolis Brewing Co. v. Liquor Control Comm'n, 305 U.S. 391, 394 (1939) ("Since the Twenty-first Amendment . . . the right of a state to prohibit or regulate the importation of intoxicating liquor is not limited by the Commerce Clause. . . ."); State Bd. of Equalization v. Young's Market Co., 299 U.S. 59 (1936).

The state relied on these cases in the district court, but we find that reliance disingenuous at best because, as early as the 1960s, the Supreme Court signaled a break with this line of reasoning. In Hostetter v. Idlewild Bon Voyage Liquor Corp., 377 U.S. 324, 331-32 (1964), a case involving the prohibition of liquor sales to departing international airline travelers, the Court observed:

> To draw a conclusion from this line of decisions [Ziffrin, Young's Market, etc.] that the Twenty-first Amendment has somehow operated to 'repeal' the Commerce Clause wherever regulation of intoxicating liquors is concerned would, however, be an absurd oversimplification. If the Commerce Clause had been pro tanto 'repealed,' then Congress would be left with no regulatory power over interstate or foreign commerce in intoxicating liquor. Such a conclusion would be patently bizarre and is demonstrably incorrect. . . .
> Both the Twenty-first Amendment and the Commerce Clause are parts of the same Constitution. Like other provisions of the Constitution, each must be considered in the light of the other, and in the context of the issues and interests at stake in any concrete case.

> The Supreme Court's approach to cases involving the intersection of the Commerce Clause and the Twenty-first Amendment has continued to develop since Hostetter. In Capital Cities Cable v. Crisp, 467 U.S. 691 (1984), although not a liquor importation or Commerce Clause case, the Court found that a state ban on alcohol advertising conflicted with regulations of the Federal Communications Commission. The Court applied a balancing test to determine "whether the interests implicated by a state regulation are so closely related to the powers reserved by the [Twenty-first] Amendment that the regulation may prevail, notwithstanding that its requirements directly conflict with express federal policies." Id. at 714. The Court concluded that the federal interest must prevail because the state's banning of alcohol advertising did not directly relate to the core concerns of the Twenty-first Amendment, i.e., to exercise "control over whether to permit importation or sale of liquor and how to structure the liquor distribution system." Id. at 715 (quotation omitted).

In subsequent cases, the Supreme Court has continued to analyze challenges to state alcohol laws by determining how closely related the law in question is to the "core concerns" of the Twenty-first Amendment. Shortly after Capital Cities was decided, the Court issued Bacchus Imports v. Dias, 468 U.S. 263 (1984), in which out-of-state wholesalers challenged a Hawaii excise tax exemption for certain locally produced alcoholic beverages. The state argued that the statute advanced legitimate state interests, that it imposed no patent discrimination against interstate trade, and that the effect on interstate commerce was minimal. Id. at 270. The Court rejected these defenses, finding that "the legislation constitutes 'economic protectionism' in every sense of the phrase," id. at 272, and noting that "one thing is certain: The central purpose of the [21st Amendment] was not to empower States to favor local liquor industries by erecting barriers to competition." Id. at 276. Instead, the Court considered "whether the principles underlying the [Twenty-first] Amendment are sufficiently implicated by the [tax exemption] to outweigh the Commerce Clause principles that would otherwise be offended." Id. at 275. In Bacchus, the state did not contest that the law's purpose was "to promote a local industry," so the Court did not have to engage in the normal Commerce Clause analysis of whether the law was sufficiently closely related to the promotion of lawful interests to vitiate its discriminatory effect. Instead, it found that the law discriminated against interstate commerce in violation of the Commerce Clause and was therefore unconstitutional.

Since Bacchus, the Supreme Court has been less than prolific in construing the content of the Twenty-first Amendment's "core concerns," addressing the definition of "core concerns" only once - and then only in a plurality opinion. In North Dakota v. United States, 495 U.S. 423 (1990), the Court had before it an intergovernmental immunity case, rather than a Commerce Clause challenge. At issue was whether North Dakota's reporting and labeling requirements were constitutional, despite interfering with contrary federal interests in selling liquor to military personnel. The Court upheld the statute, finding that the state regulations "fall within the core of the State's power under the Twenty-first Amendment" because they were enacted "[i]n the interest of promoting temperance, ensuring orderly market conditions, and raising revenue . . . ." Id. at 432.

But, because North Dakota did not involve a Commerce Clause challenge, the analysis in the plurality opinion cannot be taken to control the analysis in this case. That is, we do not interpret the "in the interest of" language to mean that a state need only be motivated by the "core concerns" of the Twenty-first Amendment to shield its laws from constitutional scrutiny. Under a Commerce Clause analysis, facially discriminatory laws are still subject to strict scrutiny, meaning that the state must demonstrate that no reasonable nondiscriminatory alternatives are available to advance the same legitimate goals. See, e.g., Hughes v. Oklahoma, 441 U.S. 322, 336-7 (1979) (finding that, "at a minimum," a statute that "on its face discriminates against interstate commerce . . . invokes the strictest scrutiny of any purported legitimate local purpose and of the absence of nondiscriminatory alternatives"). Likewise, the language in North Dakota to the effect that the states have "virtually complete control" over the importation and sale of liquor, although heavily emphasized by the district court in this case, has little value in a case requiring a Commerce Clause analysis. Because North Dakota did not involve interpretation of the Commerce Clause, we reject the implication that a state's "virtually complete control" over liquor regulation enables it to discriminate against out-of-state interests in favor of in-state interests. Bacchus simply forbids such an analysis.

Given this background, we cannot endorse the district court's characterization of the regulation in this case as a constitutionally benign product of the state's three-tier system and, thus, "a proper exercise of [Michigan's Twenty-first Amendment] authority, despite the fact that such a system places a minor burden on interstate commerce." Instead, we invoke Justice Scalia's view, expressed in an opinion concurring in the Supreme Court majority's decision striking down a state price-affirmation statute, in which he explained that:

> [The law's] invalidity is fully established by its facial discrimination against interstate commerce . . . . This is so despite the fact that the law regulates the sale of alcoholic beverages, since its discriminatory character eliminates the immunity afforded by the Twenty-first Amendment.

Healy v. Beer Institute, 491 U.S. 324, 344 (1989) (Scalia, J., concurring) (citations omitted).

The proper approach in this case, then, is to apply the traditional dormant Commerce Clause analysis and, if the provisions are unconstitutional under the Commerce Clause, to determine whether the state has shown that it has no reasonable nondiscriminatory means of advancing the "core concerns" of the Twenty-first Amendment.

In reviewing challenges brought under the Commerce Clause, the Supreme Court has long held that statutes that facially discriminate are "virtually per se" invalid, citing as a clear example "a law that overtly blocks the flow of interstate commerce at a State's borders." Philadelphia v. New Jersey, 437 U.S. 617, 624 (1978). However, a lower level of scrutiny is applied when a statute does not discriminate on its face:

> Where the statute regulates evenhandedly to effectuate a legitimate local public interest, and its effects on interstate commerce are only incidental, it will be upheld unless the burden imposed on such commerce is clearly excessive in relation to the putative local benefits. . . . [T]he extent of the burden that will be tolerated will of course depend on the nature of the local interest involved, and on whether it could be promoted as well with a lesser impact on interstate activities.

Id., quoting Pike v. Bruce Church, Inc., 397 U.S. 137, 142 (1970). Moreover, we have recognized the following test for determining whether state economic regulations violate the dormant Commerce Clause:

> When a state statute directly regulates or discriminates against interstate commerce, or when its effect is to favor in-state economic interests over out-of-state interests, [the Supreme Court has] generally struck down the statute without further inquiry. When, however, a statute has only indirect > effects on interstate commerce and regulates evenhandedly, [the Supreme Court has] examined whether the State's interest is legitimate and whether the burden on interstate commerce clearly exceeds the local benefits. In either situation the critical consideration is the overall effect of the statute on both local and interstate activity.

McNeilus Truck & Mfg., Inc. v. Ohio ex rel. Montgomery, 226 F.3d 429, 442 (6th Cir. 2000) (quotations omitted).

As we indicated in McNeilus, the proper starting point for dormant Commerce Clause analysis is to determine whether, in fact, the state provision "directly, in effect, or in purpose treats in-state and out-of-state interests differently . . . ." Id. If a court finds that the statute does discriminate, then the issue becomes, applying "rigorous scrutiny [,] . . . whether the statute serves a legitimate state interest that cannot otherwise be met." Id. In other words, laws that facially discriminate are normally invalid, unless they advance "a legitimate local purpose that cannot be adequately served by reasonable nondiscriminatory alternatives." New Energy Co. of Ind. v. Limbach, 486 U.S. 269, 278 (1988) (citations omitted).

Here, it is clear that the Michigan statutory and regulatory scheme treats out-of-state and in-state wineries differently, with the effect of benefitting the in-state wineries and burdening those from out of state. As discussed above, Michigan wineries enjoy both greater access to consumers who wish to have wine delivered to their homes, and greater profit through their exemption from the three-tier system. Out-of-state wineries, on the other hand, must participate in the costly three-tier system, to their economic detriment and, although this is not clear from the record, may be shut out of the Michigan market altogether if unable to obtain a wholesaler. The Fourth Circuit reached a similar conclusion in a case considering North Carolina's alcohol distribution system, which is nearly identical to Michigan's. In Beskind v.

Easley, 325 F.3d 506 (4th Cir. 2003), the court found that North Carolina's alcohol distribution laws, which discriminate against out-of-state wineries in favor of in-state wineries, are unconstitutional unless "the State can show that it advances a legitimate local purpose that cannot be adequately served by reasonable nondiscriminatory alternatives." Id. at 515 (internal quotations and citations omitted).

Having determined that the provision is facially discriminatory, we now turn to the question of whether the regulatory scheme is nevertheless constitutional because it "fall[s] within the core of the State's power under the Twenty-first Amendment," having been enacted "in the interest of promoting temperance, ensuring orderly market conditions, and raising revenue," North Dakota v. United States, 495 U.S. 423, 432 (1990), and because these interests "cannot be adequately served by reasonable nondiscriminatory alternatives." New Energy Co. of Ind. v. Limbach, 486 U.S. 269, 278 (1988) (citations omitted).

We conclude, based on the evidence in the record, that defendants have not shown that the Michigan scheme's discrimination between in-state and out-of-state wineries furthers any of the concerns listed above, much less that no reasonable non-discriminatory means exists to satisfy these concerns. This is so even if, taking the evidence in the light most favorable to defendants, we assume that all of the evidence they submitted was admissible. It is important to keep in mind that the relevant inquiry is not whether Michigan's three-tier system as a whole promotes the goals of "temperance, ensuring an orderly market, and raising revenue," but whether the discriminatory scheme challenged in this case - the direct-shipment ban for out-of-state wineries - does so. See, e.g., Beskind, 325 F.3d at 517 ("The question is not whether North Carolina can advance its regulatory purpose by imposing fewer burdens on in-state wineries than out-of-state wineries . . . . Rather, the question is whether discriminating in favor of in-state wineries . . . serves a Twenty-first Amendment interest."). Obviously, the state bears the burden of justifying a discriminatory statute, and "the standards for such justification are high." New Energy Co., 486 U.S. at 278; see also Cooper v. McBeath, 11 F.3d 547, 553 (5th Cir. 1994) (describing the burden of proof faced by the state as "towering"); Hughes v. Oklahoma, 441 U.S. 322, 337 (1979) ("[F]acial discrimination by itself may be a fatal defect. . . . [A]t a minimum [it] invokes the strictest scrutiny.").

The district court correctly recognized that state liquor laws are not completely immune from Commerce Clause challenges, but it placed too much reliance on Supreme Court precedent that has specifically upheld the three-tier distribution system, quoting North Dakota v. United States, 495 U.S. at 431, for the proposition that the states have "virtually complete control" over the importation and sale of liquor. As we noted above, however, North Dakota involved a Supremacy Clause challenge and did not implicate the Commerce Clause. It therefore cannot be relied on in this case in light of Supreme Court cases that do discuss the intersection of the Twenty-first Amendment and the Commerce Clause, such as Bacchus.

Nor do we find persuasive the district court's reliance on three additional cases. One, House of York, Ltd. v. Ring, 322 F. Supp. 530 (S.D.N.Y. 1970), is a district court opinion that pre-dates Bacchus. The second, Bainbridge v. Bush, 148 F. Supp. 2d 1306 (M.D.Fla. 2001), has subsequently been reversed. See Bainbridge v. Turner, 311 F.3d 1104 (11th Cir. 2002) (holding that the state must show that an alcohol-distribution statute that discriminates between in-state and out-of-state wineries furthers core concerns of the Twenty-first Amendment in order to survive a Commerce Clause challenge). The third, Bridenbaugh v. Freeman-Wilson, 227 F.3d 848 (7th Cir. 2000), is the sole federal court of appeals decision to find that analogous direct shipment laws are constitutional under the Twenty-first Amendment. However, Bridenbaugh is distinguishable on its facts, and it has been criticized by several federal courts for its failure to engage in the requisite dormant Commerce Clause analysis. See, e.g., Bolick v. Roberts, 199 F. Supp. 2d 397, 408 (E.D. Va. 2002) (finding Brindenbaugh "improperly decided because it does not rely on the established dormant Commerce Clause analysis"); Dickerson v. Bailey, 212 F. Supp. 2d 673, 682 (S.D. Tex. 2002) (observing that in its "concentration on Indiana's three-tiered scheme . . . [the court] did not discuss the last forty years of Supreme Court jurisprudence relating to balancing and harmonizing the dormant commerce clause and § 2 of the twenty-first Amendment"), aff'd, Dickerson v. Bailey, 336 F.3d 388 (5th Cir. 2003) (finding that Brindenbaugh was factually distinguishable from that case); Bainbridge v. Turner, 311 F.3d 1104, 1114 n.15 (11th Cir. 2002) (commenting that the court "disagree[s] with the analytical framework used in [Bridenbaugh]").

For example, Bridenbaugh did not involve any out-of-state wineries as plaintiffs, and it thus addressed only whether the Indiana statute discriminated against customers who wanted to have out-of-state wine shipped directly to them. Furthermore, it appears the Indiana statutes differ from the provisions at issue here, as the court found that "Indiana insists that every drop of liquor pass through its three-tiered system and be subjected to taxation." Bridenbaugh, 227 F.3d at 853. Michigan, on the other hand, effectively exempts in-state wineries from the three-tier system, an exemption it does not extend to out-of-state wineries. Finally, in contrast to this case, the Bridenbaugh plaintiffs were "concerned only with direct shipments from out-of-state sellers who lack and do not want Indiana permits." Id. at 854. By contrast, the plaintiffs in this case are willing to acquire Michigan permits and pay taxes on wines shipped; they simply want to be eligible for such permits on the same basis as in-state wineries. For all of these reasons, we do not find the opinion in Bridenbaugh persuasive.

The district court in this case was correct in finding that the Michigan alcohol distribution system discriminates between in-state and out-of-state interests to the extent that in-state wineries may obtain licenses to ship wine directly to consumers, but out-of-state wineries may not and are instead required to go through the more costly three-tier system. What the district court did not do was undertake the necessary analysis that follows from such a finding. Instead, it concluded that Michigan's system "cannot be characterized as 'mere economic protectionism,'" because the system furthers the "core concerns" of the Twenty-first Amendment. The district court's observation that "[t]he Michigan Legislature has chosen this path to ensure the collection of taxes from out-of-state wine manufacturers and to reduce the risk of alcohol falling into the hands of minors" and its conclusion that "the 21st Amendment gives it the power to do so," without more, do not constitute strict scrutiny, as required by Supreme Court precedent. It is not enough that the Michigan Legislature has chosen this particular regulatory scheme to further what are legitimate objectives. The proper inquiry, detailed above, is whether it "advances a legitimate local purpose that cannot be adequately served by reasonable nondiscriminatory alternatives." New Energy Co. of Ind. v. Limbach, 486 U.S. 269, 278 (1988). We find no evidence on this record that it does.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons set out above, we REVERSE the judgment of the district court granting summary judgment to the defendants and REMAND the case for entry of judgment in favor of the plaintiffs.

JUDGMENT

On Appeal from the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan at Detroit.

THIS CAUSE was heard on the record from the district court and was argued by counsel.

OPINION AND ORDER DENYING DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO DISMISS, DENYING PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT, AND GRANTING DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

This matter is presently before the court on cross motions for summary judgment. The issues have been fully briefed and the court has heard oral argument. For the reasons stated below, the court shall grant defendants' motion and deny plaintiffs' motion.

The plaintiffs in this case are Michigan residents who are wine connoisseurs, wine journalists, and wine collectors. One of the plaintiffs, Domaine Alfred, Inc., is a small California winery that ships its wines to customers in other states. The defendants are Michigan's governor, Michigan's attorney general, and the chair of Michigan's Liquor Control Commission. The Michigan Beer and Wine Wholesalers Association has intervened as a defendant. In addition, amicus briefs have been filed by the Michigan Interfaith Council on Alcohol Problems and by a collection of Michigan public universities, both of which support the defendants' position.

Plaintiffs have brought this action to challenge an aspect of Michigan's alcohol distribution system. Under Michigan's long-established "three-tier system," consumers must purchase alcoholic beverages from licensed retailers; retailers must purchase them from licensed wholesalers; and wholesalers must purchase them from licensed manufacturers. In one form or another, the three-tier distribution system is in place in most states. See Bainbridge v. Bush, 148 F. Supp. 2d 1306, 1308 (M.D. Fla. 2001); Vijay Shanker, Alcohol Direct Shipment Laws, 85 Va. L. Rev. 353, 355 (1999).

Plaintiffs challenge the provision of Michigan's alcohol distribution system that generally prohibits manufacturers of alcoholic beverages from shipping their products directly to Michigan consumers. Plaintiffs note that Michigan law makes an exception for Michigan wineries, which may ship their wines directly to Michigan consumers. No such exception is made for out-of-state wineries, which are required to sell their wines through Michigan wholesalers.[1]

[1] This distinction between in-state and out-of-state wineries is not directly apparent from the statutory framework. However, it can be gleaned from various Michigan Liquor Control Commission regulations, which are codified within the Michigan Administrative Code. R436.1057 states that "[a] person shall not deliver, ship, or transport into this state beer, wine, or spirits without a license authorizing such action, ..." The only applicable license, an "out of state seller of wine licence [sic]," may according to R436.1705(2)(d) be obtained by a "manufacturer which is

Plaintiffs argue that this statutory scheme discriminates against out-of-state wineries, and interferes with the free flow of commerce, in violation of the dormant Commerce Clause.[2] Plaintiffs allege that this discrimination puts out-of-state wineries at a competitive disadvantage because they must incur the expense of channeling their wines through wholesalers and retailers, whereas in-state wineries may act as retailers and sell directly to Michigan consumers. Plaintiffs contend many small out-of-state wineries, which either cannot afford or choose not to pay this additional expense, are effectively excluded from the Michigan market. This, it is alleged, harms both the out-of-state wineries and the Michigan consumers interested in purchasing their wines. Additionally, plaintiffs Ray and Eleanor Heald allege that their ability to carry out their profession as wine journalists and wine critics is hampered by their inability to obtain many located outside of this state, but in the United States, and which produces and bottles its own wine." However, under R436.1719(4) the holder of such a license may ship wine "only to a licensed wholesaler at the address of the licensed premises except upon written order of the commission." In answers to interrogatories, a representative of the Michigan Liquor Control Commission indicates that "[a]t present, there is no procedure whereby an out-of-state retailer or winery can obtain a license or approval to deliver wine directly to Michigan residents." See defendant Stewart's answers to interrogatories, Answer 16.

In contrast, the Michigan Liquor Control Commission indicates that the "ability to deliver wine to the consumer is available to winemakers licensed in Michigan, inasmuch as under the provisions of MCL 436.1113(9) these licensees are permitted to sell at retail the wines they manufacture ... A licensed Michigan winemaker may deliver their [sic] own products to customers without an SDM [specially designated merchant] license." Id. Answer 8.

[2] Article I § 8 cl. 3 of the United States Constitution grants Congress the power "[t]o regulate Commerce with foreign Nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian Tribes; ..." The Supreme Court "long has recognized that this affirmative grant of authority to Congress also encompasses an implicit or 'dormant' limitation on the authority of the States to enact legislation affecting interstate commerce." Healy v. The Beer Institute, 491 U.S. 324, 326 n.1 (1989).

wines produced by out-of-state wineries. For relief, they seek a declaratory judgment that it is unconstitutional for Michigan to prohibit out-of-state wineries from shipping wine directly to Michigan residents.

Defendants contend that Michigan's three-tier distribution system, and its different treatment of out-of-state and in-state wineries, are authorized under § 2 of the 21st Amendment.[3] Defendants argue that Michigan has a legitimate interest in ensuring that all wine sales, whether from in-state or out-of-state wineries, is carefully regulated. Defendants assert the present system ensures that all applicable taxes are collected and that minors do not have direct access to alcohol. Defendants further assert that Michigan wineries may act as retailers because they are subjected to extensive licensing requirements which cannot be applied, or practicably enforced, as to out-of-state wineries.

Defendants first argue that plaintiffs' complaint should be dismissed because plaintiffs lack standing to sue. This argument is easily disposed of. Standing is established by a showing of injury in fact, causation and redressability. See Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 560-61 (1992). In this case, plaintiffs have established each element. Plaintiffs' inability to obtain, or to sell, the wines they desire is a cognizable injury. The injury is caused by Michigan's prohibition of direct sales by out-of-state wineries to Michigan consumers. And the injury would be redressed by a ruling in plaintiffs' favor. Plaintiffs clearly have standing to assert this claim. See Bridenbaugh, 227 F.3d 849-50.

Defendants also argue that the court lacks jurisdiction over this matter under the Tax Injunction Act, 28 U.S.C. §

[3] U.S. Const. Amend. XXI, § 2 states: "The transportation or importation into any State, Territory, or possession of the United States for delivery or use therein of intoxicating liquors, in violation of the laws thereof, is hereby prohibited."

1341, which states that "[t]he district courts shall not enjoin, suspend or restrain the assessment, levy or collection of any tax under State law ...." This statute "prohibits a federal district court, in most circumstances, from issuing an injunction enjoining the collection of state taxes ... [and] from issuing a declaratory judgment holding state tax laws unconstitutional." California v. Grace Brethren Church, 457 U.S. 393, 408 (1982). This statute does not apply in this case. Plaintiffs do not seek a declaration enjoining the collection of any state tax; they seek a declaration that Michigan's direct shipment law is unconstitutional. Plaintiffs have specifically indicated they are willing and able to pay any and all applicable taxes. The motion to dismiss the complaint for lack of subject matter jurisdiction on these grounds must be denied.

While the case law concerning direct shipment laws is sparse, the more persuasive decisions have found such laws to be constitutional.[4] In House of York, Ltd. v. Ring., 322 F. Supp. 530 (S.D.N.Y. 1970), plaintiff was a Delaware beverage distributor that challenged a New York statute prohibiting the direct shipment of alcoholic beverages to New York residents. Among other things, plaintiff argued that the statute violated the Commerce Clause. In rejecting this argument, the court stated:

> A series of decisions by the Supreme Court rendered shortly after the ratification of [the 21st Amendment] made it abundantly clear that the states were considered to have acquired plenary authority

[4] The court is aware of three contrary district court decisions. See Bridenbaugh v. O'Bannon, 78 F. Supp. 2d 828 (N.D. Ind. 1999), rev'd Bridenbaugh v. Freeman-Wilson, 227 F.3d 848 (7th Cir. 2000); Swedenburg v. Kelly, 2000 WL 1264285 (S.D.N.Y. 2000) (unpublished decision denying a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss); and Dickerson v. Bailey, 87 F. Supp. 691 (S.D. Tex. 2000) (granting summary judgment for plaintiffs where state statute prohibited direct shipment and personal importation of more than three gallons of wine).

> to deal with intoxicating beverages after importation ... [W]hile it is clear that the twenty-first amendment does not abrogate the Commerce Clause, the states have wide latitude in regulating liquors coming into, rather than through, the state, and such latitude encompasses the statute now before us.

Id. at 533, 535.

In Bainbridge v. Bush, 148 F. Supp. 2d 1306 (M.D. Fla. 2001), plaintiffs challenged Florida's direct shipment law. In all relevant respects, the statutory scheme at issue in Bainbridge is identical to Michigan's. Just as in Michigan, the Florida statute permits a Florida winery to obtain a vendor's license and to sell its products directly to Florida residents; however, such a license is not available to out-of-state wineries, which must incur the additional expense of selling their products through the three-tier distribution system. The court noted that this scheme "has the practical effect of preventing many small wineries from selling their wine in Florida ... because it is not cost-effective for the smaller out-of-state wineries to acquire a Florida wholesaler." Id. at 1311 n.7. The court found that the Florida statute violated the Commerce Clause because it "directly discriminates against out-of-state retailers and nondiscriminatory alternatives are available to serve the legitimate state interests ...." Id. at 1312.

Nonetheless, the court rejected plaintiffs' constitutional challenge and found the statute to be valid under § 2 of the 21st Amendment. The court noted that in a series of decisions the Supreme Court has indicated that under this amendment states have "virtually complete control" over the importation and distribution of alcohol; that state liquor statutes are presumptively valid; and that the three-tier distribution system is "unquestionably legitimate." Id. at 1310-1312, quoting North Dakota v. United States, 495 U.S. 423, 431-32 (1990). While state liquor control laws are not immune from scrutiny, they generally are upheld so long as they implicate

"'core concerns' of the twenty-first amendment, including temperance, raising revenue and 'ensuring orderly market conditions.'" Id. at 1313, quoting North Dakota, 495 U.S. at 432. The court found that the Florida statute met this test, as it sought to address "a serious threat to the public health, safety, and welfare; to state revenue collections; and to the economy of the state." Id. at 1308, quoting Fla. Stat. § 561.545 (legislative findings). The court concluded by stating:

> [T]he discriminatory nature of Florida's statutory scheme, when considered from the perspective of out-of-state wineries, violates the dormant commerce clause. However, because the Florida statutory scheme implicates the "core concerns" of the Twenty-First Amendment, it is a valid exercise of Florida's power even as applied to out-of-state wineries. ... In this regard, the numerous interests promoted by the Florida statutory scheme, including temperance, revenue protection, and the reduction of diversion and bootlegging, outweigh the minimal burden placed on interstate commerce.

Id. at 1315.

In Bridenbaugh v. Freeman-Wilson, 227 F.3d 848 (7th Cir. 2000), the Seventh Circuit reversed a district court decision finding an Indiana direct shipment statute unconstitutional. In Bridenbaugh, as in the present case, plaintiffs were wine collectors and connoisseurs, who complained that the direct shipment statute prevented them from obtaining wine from small out-of-state wineries which could not afford to, or chose not to, sell their products through the three-tier distribution system. Plaintiff Bridenbaugh, like the Healds in the present case, also alleged that the direct shipment statute interfered with his ability to engage in his profession as a wine critic.

The district court found that the statute was unconstitutional because it violated the Commerce Clause by discriminating against out-of-state wineries in favor of in-state wineries. The district court further found that the statute did not promote temperance and that, therefore, the statute was not a proper exercise of power under the 21st Amendment. See Id. at 831 & 832 n.4 ("[T]emperance is the core purpose of the Twenty-First Amendment"; "[t]emperance is not the issue in the case now before this Court").

On appeal, the Seventh Circuit noted that the Indiana statute would be invalid under the Commerce Clause if it were directed at any consumer product other than alcoholic beverages. See Bridenbaugh v. Freeman-Wilson, 227 F.3d 848, 851 (7th Cir. 2000). The court also agreed that the statute "is hard to justify as a temperance measure." Id. Nonetheless, the appeals court reversed the judgment of the district court because the Indiana direct shipment law was a valid exercise of state authority under § 2 of the 21st Amendment. The court stated:

> Indiana Code § 7.1-5-11-1.5(a), like the statute in Bowman, regulates importation. And the shipments it regulates, direct shipments to consumers, are precisely the sort that prompted the Webb-Kenyon Act, the forefather of § 2. Section 2 thus authorizes I.C. § 7.1-5-11-1.5(a) unless the state has used its power to impose a discriminatory condition on importation, one that favors Indiana sources of alcoholic beverages over sources in other states, as Hawaii did in Bacchus. Plaintiffs contend that § 7.1-5-11-1.5(a) discriminates in this fashion, but we do not see how. Indiana insists that every drop of liquor pass through its three-tiered system and be subjected to taxation. Wine originating in California, France, Australia, or Indiana passes through the same three > tiers and is subjected to the same taxes. Where's the functional discrimination?

Id. at 853. The court acknowledged that Indiana wineries are permitted to ship their wines directly to Indiana consumers, whereas out-of-state wineries are required to sell their wines through licensed wholesalers and retailers. See Id. at 851. However, the court rejected plaintiffs' contention that this scheme discriminates unfairly against out-of-state wineries. Noting that the 21st Amendment "empowers Indiana to control alcohol in ways that it cannot control cheese," the court found that the direct shipment law "channels [out-of-state] sales through Indiana permit-holders, enabling Indiana to collect its excise tax equally from in-state and out-of-state sellers. As the history of the twenty-first amendment confirms, this is precisely what § 2 is for." Id. at 851, 854.

The court believes that the decisions in House of York, Bridenbaugh and Bainbridge correctly concluded that direct shipment laws are a permissible exercise of state power under § 2 of the 21st Amendment. While the dormant Commerce Clause would prohibit states from burdening interstate commerce by applying such laws to any other products, the 21st Amendment directly authorizes the states "to control alcohol in ways that it cannot control cheese." Bridenbaugh, 227 F.3d at 851. The Supreme Court has specifically upheld the three-tier distribution system and has stated more than once that "within the area of its jurisdiction, the State has 'virtually complete control' over the importation and sale of liquor and the structure of the liquor distribution system." North Dakota v. United States, 495 U.S. 423, 431 (1990), citing California Retail Liquor Dealers Ass'n v. Midcal Aluminum, Inc., 445 U.S. 97, 110 (1980). See also Brown-Forman Distillers Corp. v. New York State Liquor Auth., 476 U.S. 573, 584-85 (1986) (noting that while the 21st Amendment does not authorize a state to regulate liquor sales in other states, the amendment does give states "wide latitude to regulate the importation and distribution of liquor within their territories"); Capital Cities Cable, Inc. v. Crisp, 467 U.S. 691, 712 (1984) (noting that § 2 "reserves to the States power to impose burdens on interstate commerce in intoxicating liquor that, absent the Amendment, would clearly be invalid under the Commerce Clause"). The control is "virtually complete," and not "complete," because a state's actions under the 21st Amendment must further "core" concerns of that Amendment -- namely, "the interest of promoting temperance, ensuring orderly market conditions, and raising revenue." North Dakota, 495 U.S. at 432. These interests are not furthered -- and the 21st Amendment will not deflect a Commerce Clause challenge -- when, for example, a state exempts locally produced alcoholic beverages from a generally applicable liquor excise tax, thereby engaging in "mere economic protectionism." Bacchus Imports, Ltd. v. Dias, 468 U.S. 263 (1984). The Supreme Court has invalidated other state statutes as well, when the burden on interstate commerce is not justified by "core" 21st Amendment concerns. See Healy v. The Beer Institute, 491 U.S. 324 (1989) (invalidating price affirmation statute); Brown-Forman Distillers Corp. v. New York State Liquor Auth., 476 U.S. 573 (1986) (same); Hostetter v. Idlewild Bon Voyage Liquor Corp., 377 U.S. 324 (1964) (invalidating prohibition of liquor sales to departing international airline travelers).

The court is persuaded that Michigan's direct shipment law is a permitted exercise of state power under § 2 of the 21st Amendment. The measure cannot be characterized as "mere economic protectionism." The direct shipment law is one provision of a comprehensive system that regulates the flow of all alcoholic beverages into and within the State of Michigan. Out-of-state wineries are not prohibited from selling their products in Michigan; they simply must do so in a manner prescribed by Michigan's statutory scheme -- namely, by going through a licensed wholesaler. The Michigan Legislature has chosen this path to ensure the collection of taxes from out-of-state wine manufacturers and to reduce the risk of alcohol falling into the hands of minors. The 21st Amendment gives it the power to do so.

For the reasons stated above,

IT IS ORDERED that plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment is denied.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that plaintiffs' requests for injunctive and declaratory relief are denied.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that defendants' motions to dismiss or for summary judgment due to lack of standing or for lack of subject matter jurisdiction are denied.

ORDER DENYING PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR RECONSIDERATION

This matter is presently before the court on plaintiffs' motion for reconsideration of the court's opinion and order granting summary judgment for defendants. The motion is denied because plaintiffs have not "demonstrate[d] a palpable defect by which the court and the parties have been misled [and] . . . that correcting the defect will result in a different disposition of the case." E.D. Mich. LR 7.1(g)(3).

The bottom line in this case is that the 21st Amendment authorizes states to regulate the flow of alcohol within their borders. The three-tier distribution system is a proper exercise of that constitutional authority, despite the fact that such a system places a minor burden on interstate commerce.

The court did not address the parties' cross motions to strike various affidavits and other evidence because the court did not consider the challenged evidence in deciding the summary judgment motions. In effect, the court denied the cross motions to strike as moot. This case turns on largely legal questions, not factual disputes. Accordingly, person who knowingly sells or furnishes alcoholic liquor to a minor, or who fails to make diligent inquiry as to whether the person is a minor, is guilty of a misdemeanor. A retail licensee or a retail licensee's clerk, agent, or employee who violates this subsection shall be punished in the manner provided for licensees in section 909, except that if the violation is the result of an undercover operation in which the minor received alcoholic liquor under the direction of the state police, the commission, or a local police agency as part of an enforcement action, the retail licensee's clerk, agent, or employee is responsible for a state civil infraction and may be ordered to pay a civil fine of not more than $100.00. Except as otherwise provided in subsection (2), a person who is not a retail licensee or a retail licensee's clerk, agent, or employee and who violates this subsection is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000.00 and imprisonment for not more than 60 days for a first offense, a fine of not more than $2,500.00 and imprisonment for not more than 90 days for a second or subsequent offense, and may be ordered to perform community service. A suitable sign describing the content of this section and the penalties for its violation shall be posted in a conspicuous place in each room where alcoholic liquor is sold. The signs shall be approved and furnished by the commission.

IT IS ORDERED that plaintiffs' motion for reconsideration is denied.

(2) A person who is not a retail licensee or the retail licensee's clerk, agent, or employee and who violates subsection (1) is guilty of a felony, punishable by imprisonment for not more than 10 years or a fine of not more than $5,000.00, or both, if the subsequent consumption of the alcoholic liquor by the minor is a direct and substantial cause of that person's death or an accidental injury that causes that person's death.

(3) If a violation occurs in an establishment that is licensed by the commission for consumption of alcoholic liquor on the licensed premises, a person who is a licensee or the clerk, agent, or employee of a licensee shall not be charged with a violation of subsection (1) or section 801(2) unless the licensee or the clerk, agent, or employee of the licensee knew or should have reasonably known with the exercise of due diligence that a person less than 21 years of age possessed or consumed alcoholic liquor on the licensed premises and the licensee or clerk, agent, or employee of the licensee failed to take immediate corrective action.

(4) If the enforcing agency involved in the violation is the state police or a local police agency, a licensee shall not be charged with a violation of subsection (1) or section 801(2) unless all of the following occur, if applicable:

(a) Enforcement action is taken against the minor who purchased or attempted to purchase, consumed or attempted to consume, or possessed or attempted to possess alcoholic liquor.

(b) Enforcement action is taken under this section against the person 21 years of age or older who is not the retail licensee or the retail licensee's clerk, agent, or employee who sold or furnished the alcoholic liquor to the minor.

(c) Enforcement action under this section is taken against the clerk, agent, or employee who directly sold or furnished alcoholic liquor to the minor.

(5) If the enforcing agency is the commission and an appearance ticket or civil infraction citation has not been issued, then the commission shall recommend to a local law enforcement agency that enforcement action be taken against a violator of this section or section 703 who is not a licensee. However, subsection (4) does not apply if the minor against whom enforcement action is taken under section 703, the clerk, agent, or employee of the licensee who directly sold or furnished alcoholic liquor to the minor, or the person 21 years of age or older who sold or furnished alcoholic liquor to the minor is not alive or is not present in this state at the time the licensee is charged. Subsection (4)(a) does not apply under either of the following circumstances:

(a) The violation of subsection (1) is the result of an undercover operation in which the minor purchased or received alcoholic liquor under the direction of the person's employer and with the prior approval of the local prosecutor's office as part of an employer-sponsored internal enforcement action.

(b) The violation of subsection (1) is the result of an undercover operation in which the minor purchased or received alcoholic liquor under the direction of the state police, the commission, or a local police agency as part of an enforcement action.

(6) Any initial or contemporaneous purchase or receipt of alcoholic liquor by the minor under subsection (5)(a) or (b) must have been under the direction of the state police, the commission, or the local police agency and must have been part of the undercover operation.

(7) If a minor participates in an undercover operation in which the minor is to purchase or receive alcoholic liquor under the supervision of a law enforcement agency, his or her parents or legal guardian shall consent to the participation if that person is less than 18 years of age.

(8) In an action for the violation of this section, proof that the defendant or the defendant's agent or employee demanded and was shown, before furnishing alcoholic liquor to a minor, a motor vehicle operator's or chauffeur's license or a registration certificate issued by the federal selective service, or other bona fide documentary evidence of the age and identity of that person, shall be a defense to an action brought under this section.

(9) The commission shall provide, on an annual basis, a written report to the department of state police as to the number of actions heard by the commission involving violations of this section and section 801(2). The report shall include the disposition of each action and contain figures representing the following categories:

(a) Decoy operations.

(b) Off-premises violations.

(c) On-premises violations.

(d) Repeat offenses within the 3 years preceding the date of that report.

(10) As used in this section:

(a) "Corrective action" means action taken by a licensee or a clerk, agent, or employee of a licensee designed to prevent a minor from further possessing or consuming alcoholic liquor on the licensed premises. Corrective action includes, but is not limited to, contacting a law enforcement agency and ejecting the minor and any other person suspected of aiding and abetting the minor.

(b) "Diligent inquiry" means a diligent good faith effort to determine the age of a person, which includes at least an examination of an official Michigan operator's or chauffeur's license, an official Michigan personal identification card, or any other bona fide picture identification which establishes the identity and age of the person.

436.1801 Granting or renewal of license; surety; selling, furnishing, or giving alcoholic liquor to minor or to person visibly intoxicated; right of action for damage or personal injury; actual damages; institution of action; notice; survival of action; general reputation as evidence of relation; separate actions by parents; commencement of action against retail licensee; indemnification; defenses available to licensee; rebuttable presumption; prohibited causes of action; section as exclusive remedy for money damages against licensee; civil action subject to revised judicature act.

Sec. 801. (1) Except as otherwise provided in this act, before the approval and granting, or renewal, of a license, the following licensees or applicants for that license shall make, execute, and deliver to the commission a bond executed by a surety company authorized to do business in the state or, in the discretion of the commission, by approved personal surety running to the people of the state, in the following amounts:

(a) A manufacturer of beer, a manufacturer of wine, a mixed spirit drink manufacturer, an outstate seller of beer, an outstate seller of mixed spirit drink, and an outstate seller of wine, a bond in an amount equal to 1/12 of the total beer, mixed spirit drink, or wine excise taxes paid to the state in the last calendar year or a bond in the sum of $1,000.00, whichever is greater, for the faithful performance of the conditions of the license issued and for compliance with this act. A surety shall not cancel a bond issued under this subdivision except upon 30 days' written notice to the commission.

(b) A special license authorizing the sale of beer, mixed spirit drink, wine, or spirits for consumption on the premises, a bond in the sum of $1,000.00. A bond issued under this subdivision shall remain in effect for 60 days after the expiration of the special license. A bond is not required for a church or school.

(2) A retail licensee shall not directly, individually, or by a clerk, agent, or servant sell, furnish, or give alcoholic liquor to a minor except as otherwise provided in this act. A retail licensee shall not directly or indirectly, individually or by a clerk, agent, or servant sell, furnish, or give alcoholic liquor to a person who is visibly intoxicated.

(3) Except as otherwise provided in this section, an individual who suffers damage or who is personally injured by a minor or visibly intoxicated person by reason of the unlawful selling, giving, or furnishing of alcoholic liquor to the minor or visibly intoxicated person, if the unlawful sale is proven to be a proximate cause of the damage, injury, or death, or the spouse, child, parent, or guardian of that individual, shall have a right of action in his or her name against the person who by selling, giving, or furnishing the alcoholic liquor has caused or contributed to the intoxication of the person or who has caused or contributed to the damage, injury, or death. In an action pursuant to this section, the plaintiff shall have the right to recover actual damages in a sum of not less than $50.00 in each case in which the court or jury determines that intoxication was a proximate cause of the damage, injury, or death.

(4) An action under this section shall be instituted within 2 years after the injury or death. A plaintiff seeking damages under this section shall give written notice to all defendants within 120 days after entering an attorney-client relationship for the purpose of pursuing a claim under this section. Failure to give written notice within the time specified shall be grounds for dismissal of a claim as to any defendants that did not receive that notice unless sufficient information for determining that a retail licensee might be liable under this section was not known and could not reasonably have been known within the 120 days. In the event of the death of either party, the right of action under this section shall survive to or against his or her personal representative. In each action by a husband, wife, child, or parent, the general reputation of the relation of husband and wife or parent and child shall be prima facie evidence of the relation, and the amount recovered by either the husband, wife, parent, or child shall be his or her sole and separate property. The damages, together with the costs of the action, shall be recovered in an action under this section. If the parents of the individual who suffered damage or who was personally injured are entitled to damages under this section, the father and mother may sue separately, but recovery by 1 is a bar to action by the other.

(5) An action under this section against a retail licensee shall not be commenced unless the minor or the alleged intoxicated person is a named defendant in the action and is retained in the action until the litigation is concluded by trial or settlement.

(6) Any licensee subject to the provisions of subsection (3) regarding the unlawful selling, furnishing, or giving of alcoholic liquor to a visibly intoxicated person shall have the right to full indemnification from the alleged visibly intoxicated person for all damages awarded against the licensee.

(7) All defenses of the alleged visibly intoxicated person or the minor shall be available to the licensee. In an action alleging the unlawful sale of alcoholic liquor to a minor, proof that the defendant retail licensee or the defendant's agent or employee demanded and was shown a Michigan driver license or official state personal identification card, appearing to be genuine and showing that the minor was at least 21 years of age, shall be a defense to the action.

(8) There shall be a rebuttable presumption that a retail licensee, other than the retail licensee who last sold, gave, or furnished alcoholic liquor to the minor or the visibly intoxicated person, has not committed any act giving rise to a cause of action under subsection (3).

(9) The alleged visibly intoxicated person shall not have a cause of action pursuant to this section and a person shall not have a cause of action pursuant to this section for the loss of financial support, services, gifts, parental training, guidance, love, society, or companionship of the alleged visibly intoxicated person.

(10) This section provides the exclusive remedy for money damages against a licensee arising out of the selling, giving, or furnishing of alcoholic liquor.

(11) Except as otherwise provided for under this section and section 815, a civil action under subsection (3) against a retail licensee shall be subject to the revised judicature act of 1961, 1961 PA 236, MCL 600.101 to 600.9947.

436.1903 Suspension or revocation of license; violation of act or rules; penalty; disposition; hearing; procedure; fee; right of appeal; institution of criminal prosecutions; defense; rules; appointment of agents to hear violation cases; authority and responsibility; ineligibility of designated agent for appointment to commission.

Sec. 903. (1) The commission or any commissioner or duly authorized agent of the commission designated by the chairperson of the commission, upon due notice and proper hearing, may suspend or revoke any license upon a violation of this act or any of the rules promulgated by the commission under this act. The commission or any commissioner or duly authorized agent of the commission designated by the chairperson of the commission, may assess a penalty of not more than $300.00 for each violation of this act or rules promulgated under this act, or not more than $1,000.00 for each violation of section 801(2), in addition to or in lieu of revocation or suspension of the license, which penalty shall be paid to the commission and deposited with the state treasurer and shall be credited to the general fund of the state. The commission shall hold a hearing and order the suspension or revocation of a license if the licensee has been found liable for 3 or more separate violations of section 801(2) which violations occurred on different occasions within a 24-month period unless such violations for the sale, furnishing, or giving alcoholic liquor to a minor were discovered by the licensee and disclosed to an appropriate law enforcement agency immediately upon discovery.

(2) The commission shall provide a procedure by which a licensee who is aggrieved by any penalty imposed under subsection (1) and any suspension or revocation of a license ordered by the commission, a commissioner, or a duly authorized agent of the commission may request a hearing for the purpose of presenting any facts or reasons to the commission as to why the penalty, suspension, or revocation should be modified or rescinded. Any such request shall be in writing and accompanied by a fee of $25.00. The commission, after reviewing the record made before a commissioner or a duly authorized agent of the commission, may allow or refuse to allow the hearing in accordance with the commission's rules. The right to a hearing provided in this subsection, however, shall not be interpreted by any court as curtailing, removing, or annulling the right of the commission to suspend or revoke licenses as provided for in this act. A licensee does not have a right of appeal from the final determination of the commission, except by leave of the circuit court. Notice of the order of suspension or revocation of a license or of the assessment of a penalty, or both, shall be given in the manner prescribed by the commission. The suspension or revocation of a license or the assessment of a penalty, or both, by the commission or a duly authorized agent of the commission does not prohibit the institution of a criminal prosecution for a violation of this act. The institution of a criminal prosecution for a violation of this act or the acquittal or conviction of a person for a violation of this act does not prevent the suspension or revocation of a license or the assessment of a penalty, or both, by the commission. In a hearing for the suspension or revocation of a license issued under this act, proof that the defendant licensee or an agent or employee of the licensee demanded and was shown, before furnishing any alcoholic liquor to a minor, a motor vehicle operator or chauffeur license or a registration certificate issued by the federal selective service, or other bona fide documentary evidence of majority and identity of the person, may be offered as evidence in a defense to a proceeding for the suspension or revocation of a license issued under this act. A licensee who has reason to believe that a minor has used fraudulent identification to purchase alcoholic liquor in violation of section 703 shall file a police report concerning the violation with a local law enforcement agency and shall also present the alleged fraudulent identification to the local law enforcement agency at the time of filing the report if the identification is in the possession of the licensee. The commission may promulgate rules pursuant to the administrative procedures act of 1969, 1969 PA 306, MCL 24.201 to 24.328, regarding the utilization by licensees of equipment designed to detect altered or forged driver licenses, state identification cards, and other forms of identification.

(3) In addition to the hearing commissioners provided for in section 209, the chairperson of the commission may designate not more than 2 duly authorized agents to hear violation cases. A person appointed under this subsection shall be a member in good standing of the state bar of Michigan.

(4) A duly authorized agent who has been designated by the chairperson pursuant to subsection (3) shall have, in the hearing of violation cases, the same authority and responsibility as does a hearing commissioner under this act and the rules promulgated under this act.

(5) A duly authorized agent who has been designated by the chairperson pursuant to subsection (3) shall be ineligible for appointment to the commission for a period of 1 year after the person ceases to serve as a duly authorized agent.

436.1909 Violation of act as misdemeanor; penalties; legislative intent.

Sec. 909. (1) Except as otherwise provided in this act, a person, other than a person required to be licensed under this act, who violates this act is guilty of a misdemeanor.

(2) Except as otherwise provided in this act, a licensee who violates this act, or a rule or regulation promulgated under this act, is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by imprisonment for not more than 6 months or a fine of not more than $500.00, or both.

(3) A person who performs any act for which a license is required under this act without first obtaining that license or who sells alcoholic liquor in a county that has prohibited the sale of alcoholic liquor under section 1107 is guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment for not more than 1 year or by a fine of not more than $1,000.00, or both.

(4) It is the intent of the legislature that the court, in imposing punishment under this section, should discriminate between casual or slight violations and habitual sales of alcoholic liquor or attempts to commercialize violations of this act or the rules or regulations promulgated under this act.
